

Recognizing Signs of Suicide Risk

Upcoming training sessions offered by the American Association of Suicidology

Health Net Community Solutions, Inc. (Health Net) and CalViva Health are sharing information with primary care physicians (PCPs), physician assistants (PAs) and registered nurses (RNs) about an upcoming learning collaborative on recognizing and responding to suicide risk (RRSR). All training is available at no cost for both days — Saturday, November 10, 2018, and Sunday, November 11, 2018.

OVERVIEW

The Fresno Suicide Prevention Collaborative is sponsoring the training on RRSR. The American Association of Suicidology is presenting the training, which will be led by Matthew B. Wintersteen, PhD, an associate professor and Director of Research in the Division of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry at Sidney Kimmel Medical College at Thomas Jefferson University.

COURSE DESCRIPTION, SCHEDULE AND REGISTRATION

RRSR is a series of trainings that focuses on eight topical areas, which expand to cover 24 core competencies. The evidence-based treatment guidelines that will be used in the training were developed by a panel of renowned experts in the field of suicidology.

RRSR training on November 10 will cover information on identifying risks and treatment options. Train the trainer sessions are available on both November 10 and November 11, which provide the opportunity to become a certified RRSR trainer for other practitioners going forward.

Refer to the table below for the times scheduled for each training session:
